Over One Hundred In New Chamber

ELECTION NEXT MONDAY

Characterized by most pronounced enthusiasm a large and representative gathering of Ocean Beach citizens took part in the organization meeting of the new Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce held in the Congregational church building on DeFoe street last Monday night, with temporary chairman Kirk Smith presiding. Following the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, a governmental plan providing for the division of the community into five districts, with a board of directors composed of two members from each district was approved, and separate caucuses were held for selecting the respective representatives, who were empowered with the duty of naming another representative from each district as a nominating committee.

District Plan

The boundaries of the five districts are given in detail in the constitution and may be briefly and plainly outlined as follows:

First District—Inclusive of Del Monte avenue, from Bacon to the ocean (Cliff section).

Second District—From Del Monte avenue to Brighton avenue and from Bacon street to Eber street; boundary streets not included (Centre section).

Third District—Inclusive of Bacon street from Coronado avenue to the bay, westward to the ocean (Ocean section).

Fourth District — Inclusive of Brighton, from Bacon to E bers and northward to the bay (Bay section).

Fifth District—Inclusive of Ebers, from Del Monte to the bay and flats, and eastward to Ocean Beach limits (Hill section).

Board of Directors

Two representatives from each of the five districts were elected as follows for the board of directors:

First—Geo. Copeland, E. E. Ebersole; second, C. S. Moore, F. J. Stoezel; third, J. Demarco, C. H. Peltcher; fourth, W. Flaherty, C. S. Schactebeck; fifth, W. F. Agan, C. C. Kellogg.

The nominating committee, representing one from each district, was chosen as follows: First, Dr. J. E. Castien; second, F. B. Harrison; third, J. Dougherty; fourth, J. R. Jones; fifth, A. Dumont.

The board of directors held a special meeting last Tuesday night, when they adopted a resolution to the effect that the nominating committee should evolve into a policy committee, as provided by the constitution. It was also decided to recommend that an emolument for the combined office of secretary-treasurer be fixed at one-fourth (50c.) of the present annual dues ($2.00) of each member, such stipend being payable in quarterly installments.

Nominees Named

The nominating committee met in speical session on last Wednesday night, when the following nominees (two for each chair office in accordance with the requirements of the constitution) were chosen to be voted for by ballot at the announced meeting of the entire body composing the new Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce on next Monday night, June 16.

Fine Shakespearian Production Assured By Katherine Tingley

IDYLLIC SETTING FOR BEAUTIFUL NATURE-PLAY AT LOMALAND

"As You Like It," the beautiful pastoral play that is part of our legacy from Shakespeare, will be presented at the famous Greek Theater at the International Theosophical Headquarters, Point Loma, next Wednesday evening, June 18th, under the personal direction of Katherine Tingley. The cast is composed of students of the Raja-Yoga College and Theosophical University, of which Tingley is foundress-president, and all rehearsals are under her supervision. Several of the players have been under her dramatic training since childhood, and with special attention being given to the music-setting for the production, and some new spectacular and scenic effects, the forthcoming performance will eclipse all previous ones.

Of this play Katherine Tingley wrote, in her book, "The Path of the Mystic": "Life so needs beauty and laughter! My aim in presenting this drama is in part to bring these back. I would have you mirthful with me in the 'golden world' pictured by Shakespeare in this play. Wholesome mirth is creative in itself." And she has also said: "It is the heart that the drama reaches with its message. That is the secret of its power to regenerate man."

This comedy is essentially a nature-play, set as it is in the old historic Forest of Arden which Shakespeare and his mother, sweet Mary Arden, knew and loved so well. It is indeed, as the banished Duke calls it, a "golden world" with

"Tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

And there, for an unforgetable three hours you will walk, with the "very Rosalind" and her companion, the lovely Celia, with lovesick Orlando hanging his verses on every tree, with the "melancholy Jacques" who can "suck melancholy out of a song as a weasel sucks eggs," with Le Beau the inimitable fop, with Corin and Silvius the shepherds, with Phebe the vain little shepherdess, with William the county lout, with the awkward wench Audrey—"a poor thing but mine own" so Touchstone describes her—with Oliver and his servant, dear old Adam in whom "so well appears the constant service of the antique world," with Amiens who makes the Forest ring with his gay songs, and with Touchstone already mentioned, "the jewel of Shakespeare's Tools." What a company!

In particular the songs of Amiens must be mentioned, rendered in a fine, clear tenor, and to a music-setting composed especially for them. They include four of the loveliest lyrics Shakespeare ever wrote: "Under the Greenwood Tree," "There Was a Lover and His Lass," "What Shall He Have Who Killed the Deer?" and "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind." Solo and ensemble, they resound through the leafy woods of Arden in a way to bring the listener absolutely en rapport with the sweetness of nature and the contentment and joy of the players themselves.

"As You Like It," written when Shakespeare's powers had matured, and represents him at his best. The incidental music, as well as the overtures, which latter include numbers by Saint-Saens and Edward German that were composed for Shakespearean productions, will be rendered by the Isis Conservatory Theater Orchestra of forty pieces, and is an evening's entertainment in itself.

As to the theater—it is ideal for the purpose. Seldon Cheney, in his imposing volume on Greek theaters, thus describes it: "Certainly no theater in ancient Greece ever had a greater loveliness, or a more idyllic background. As one comes to it on its precipice above the sea, it seems to nestle like some gleaming white jewel in a setting fashioned with perfect artistry." Built as it was by Madame Tingley herself, with the production of classic plays in view, a marvelous perfection is the result. The acoustics are perfect and it is sheltered and therefore always comfortable.

For tickets to "As You Like It" call at the Theosophical Bookstore, 1123 Fourth street, San Diego (next to entrance Colonial Theater); or phone Main 2166. Private autos parked free inside the Theosophical grounds. For streetcar, take O. B. car No. 14, leaving Third and Broadway at 6:40 and 7:10, stopping at Ocean Beach Junction, thence by auto bus to Theosophical grounds and return without additional fare, by courtesy of Claus Spreckels. Theater is open at 7:30, play begins at 8:10. All seats cushioned. Bring wraps for the late drive home.

It will do your EYES good to see CASTIEN, Rooms 16-17, Sefton Bldg., Fifth and C. Phone 644-27.

WHALES

Close to the geranium borders along the paths circling the end of Ballast Point are the huge bleached vertebrae of a whale, taken—who knows? nearly a hundred years ago in the harbor here. As you drive around the bay you will find other similar reminders of that whaling industry which began to make the Pacific coast famous the world around even before gold was discovered.

There were two whaling stations on Point Loma, one near La Playa and the other in the cove below Fort Rosecrans to the west of Ballast Point.

Smythe, at page 110, has this note:

"As late as the early forties, San Diego Bay was a favorite resort for female whales in their calving season, and at such times, on any bright day, scores of them could be seen spouting and basking in the sunlight. On North Island there was a spring which the inhabitants of La Playa were in the habit of visiting in canoes to get a supply of fresh water. Often when these whales were passing in or out, it was deemed unsafe to cross, and the boatmen had to wait for hours. But when the chase began in earnest and steamers began to visit the harbor, the whales abandoned the place and went farther down the coast. They still passed by near the shore, however, in the winter and spring months, and came in near Ballast Point in great numbers. Andrew Cassidy says he has often counted as many as eleven whales inside Ballast Point, all spouting at one time, and in January, 1872, it is on record that fifteen were seen at one time."

This Andrew Cassidy, an Irishman in the employ of the engineering corps at West Point, was one of a party sent to the Pacific coast under Lieutenant W. T. Trowbridge, and when in July, 1853, a tidal gauge was established at La Playa he was left in charge and there remained for seventeen years.

Ballast Point seems to have been the center of the local whaling industry. The whales were killed by a bomb lance operated from small boats. They were then towed in to shore and after being cut up the flesh was thrown into two large pots and tried out.

It is rather difficult to picture this scene on Ballast Point: men standing over these great pots, straining out the browned pieces of blubber which were then pressed out and, after the oil was extracted, used for fuel. The business in 1868 was of such a nature that there were two companies with twenty men employed in boats and a dozen rendering oil. At that time it was one of the pleasures of the residents to go out to the (upper) lighthouse to watch the taking of the whales; though the smoke and fumes from the trying works on Ballast Point were not quite so attractive.

Dana mentions an adventure with a whale at San Pedro, introducing his remarks in this way:

"This being the spring season, San Pedro, as well as all the other open ports upon the coast, was filled with whales that had come in to make their annual visit upon soundings. For the first few days that we were here and at Santa Barbara we watched them with great interest, calling out 'There she blows,' every time we saw the spout of one breaking the surface of the water; but they soon became so common that we took little notice of them."

Smythe says that these whales were gray; that no reliable statistics can be given as to the total output, but that it ran well into the thousands of barrels and was an important article of export; and that among the older citizens of San Diego are several who came here to engage in this chase, and followed it for many years.

The hide business, the whaling business, the good fishing hereabouts, brought ships in increasing numbers into the bay. The presidio had fallen into decay, the mission was becoming a memory, while La Playa—busy La Playa—continued to make the San Diego of that time a place of considerable importance; for it was also the shipping point for the products of the great California ranches of the southwest. Here pack-trains met vessels bringing in provisions; and other vessels from the lower ports put in with cargoes of abalone and made exchanges with ships from the great commercial centers.

Mrs. Hilliard in her "Few Chronicles" tells the following story which links up with the whaling industry, with the literary life of San Diego and with the life of one of the most interesting personages Point Loma has known—Margaret MacGregor:

". . . a vessel, the 'Magellen,' moored at the usual landing place off La Playa. One of her crew thought he saw a little animal on the Coronado shore among the bushes and came near shooting it, but something held him back. It was found to be a golden-haired child, a little girl from five to six years old, homeless and alone. Making a landing, the sailors took her to La Playa. She talked in a strange language but among the population of La Playa was a Russian, also driftwood. He interpreted. She was the remnant of a wreck; the men had died on land; the child's mother had died and was buried at sea. The child said the men were 'sleeping' on the Coronado sands. Upon examining their bodies, papers were found revealing a part of their story."

They were whalers. The sailors buried them over on Coronado, but years afterwards fishermen found their bones. These were gathered up and boxed and taken to the old burying ground, supposed to be the one back of the Quarantine Station. "A Catholic woman," said Mrs. Hilliard, "who was living still not many years ago, read a prayer herself over their last resting place. She was known to the Catholics around San Diego and Point Loma as Donna Rita, though her real name was Margaret MacGregor."

This child was called La Loma and adopted into the family of an overseer of a large hacienda. When she grew to womanhood she had many lovers, chosing one, a poor man, whom Bayard Taylor in his poem, "The Fight of Paso del Mar," refers to as "Pablo of San Diego." One of her disappointed following murdered the girl and fled to False Bay, and attempted to cross by a pass that used to exist back of La Playa but which has many years since been obliterated by winds and rains, and there met the very man whom the girl had chosen for her husband. "Pablo little dreamed what had taken place. But as was quite natural, fear entered the heart of the guilty man when he saw the favored suitor here and supposed he was being hunted; and there on that narrow path they met and fought."

"They grappled with desperate madness
On the slippery edge of the wall;
They swayed on the bank together,
Reeled out to the rush of the fall.
A cry of the wildest death anguish
Rang faint through the mist afar
And the riderless mule went homeward
From the fight of the Paso del Mar."

"Anyhow," Jim went on, "what's the use? I shan't be disturbed this year—and after that—what's the use?"

"Why, Jim," said the colonel, "you aren't getting short of breath are you? I thought you good for the mile, and you aren't turning out a quarter horse, are you? I don't know what all it is you want to do, but I don't believe you can do it in nine months, can you?"

"Not in nine years!" replied Jim.

"Well, then, let's plan for ten years," said the colonel. "I ain't going to become a reformer at my time of life as a temporary job. Will you stick if we can swing the thing for you?"

"I will," said Jim, in a manner of a person taking the vows in some solemn initiation.

"All right," said the colonel. "We'll keep quiet and see how many votes we can muster up at the election. How many can you speak for?"

Jim gave himself for a few minutes to thought. It was a new thing to him, this matter of mustering votes—and a thing which he had always looked upon as rather reprehensible. The citizen should go forth with no coercion, no persuasion, no suggestion, and vote his sentiments.

"How many can you round up?" persisted the colonel.

"I think," said Jim, "that I can speak for myself and Old Man Simms!"

The colonel laughed.

"Fine politician!" he repeated. "Fine politician! Well, Jim, you round up yourself and Old Man Simms and I'll see what I can do—I'll see what I can do!"

CHAPTER XIV

A Minor Casts Half a Vote.

March came in like neither a lion nor a lamb, but was scarcely a week old before the wild ducks had begun to score the sky above Bronson's slew looking for open water and badly-harvested cornfields. Wild geese, too, honked from on high as if in wonder that these great prairies on which their forefathers had been wont fearlessly to alight had been changed into a disgusting expanse of farms. Colonel Woodruff's hired man, Pete, stopped Newton Bronson and Raymond Simms as they tramped across the colonel's pasture, gun in hand, trying to make themselves believe that the shooting was good.

"This ain't no country to hunt in," said he. "Did either of you fellows ever have any real duck-shooting?"

"The mountings," said Raymond, "air poor places for ducks."

"Not big enough water," suggested Pete. "Some wood-ducks, I suppose?"

"Along the creeks and rivers, yes, seh," said Raymond, "but nothing to depend on."

"I've never been nowhere," said Newton, "except once to Minnesota—and—and that wasn't in the shooting season."

A year ago Newton would have boasted of having "bummed" his way to Faribault. His hesitant speech was a proof of the embarrassment his new respectability sometimes inflicted upon him.

"I used to shoot ducks for the market at Spirit Lake," said Pete. "I know Fred Gilbert just as well as I know you. But that's all over, now. You've got to go so fur now to get decent shooting where the farmers won't drive you off, that it costs nine dollars to send a postcard home."

"I think we'll have fine shooting on the slew in a few days," said Newton.

"Humph!" scoffed Pete. "I give you my word, if I hadn't promised the colonel I'd stay with him another year, I'd take a side-door Pullman for the Sand Hills of Nebraska or the Devil's lake country tomorrow—if I had a gun."

"If it wasn't for a pasel of things that keep me hyeh," said Raymond, "I'd like to go, too."

"The colonel," said Pete, "needs me. He needs me in the election tomorrow. What's the matter of your ol' man, Newt? What for does he vote for that Bonner, and throw down an old neighbor?"

"I can't do anything with him!" exclaimed Newton irritably. "He's all tangled up with Peterson and Bonner."

"Well," said Pete, "if he'd just stay at home it would help some. If he votes for Bonner, it'll be just about a stand-off."

"He never misses a vote!" said Newton despairingly.

"Can't you cripple him some way?" asked Pete jocularly. "Darned funny when a boy o' your age can't control his father's vote! So long!"

ROYAL RECEPTION BY MEN OF THE MARINES TO O. B. W. C. T. U.

The half dozen rather imposing titular initials in the above headline are used to designate the Ocean Beach Women's Christian Temperance Union, of which organization a large and representative committee were extended a very courtly reception by the officers and men at the Marine base last Wednesday 'round the noon hour. The occasion marked the celebration of "Mission Flower Day" by the W. C. T. U. and proved exceptionally delightful to all the participants. Several automobiles filled with flowers and the fair sex composed the goodly crowd from Ocean Beach, who were welcomed by officers duly assigned by Col. J. T. Meyer, commanding officer.

The ladies were received by Lieut. Wm. L. Harding, of Texas, and Lieut. Wallace C. Harding of Washington, D. C., both of whom endeared themselves to their visitors by their gallantry and courtesy in unfolding the mysteries of the various departments at the Marine base, as well as by their courteous hospitality in serving a noon luncheon of iced tea and cakes.

The president of the O. B. W. C. T. U., Mrs. Chas. F. May, admirably voiced the thanks of the visiting committee and introduced Mrs. Kirk Smith (Katherine), who responded to several expressions of welcome on the part of the officers by extending to them a most cordial invitation to Ocean Beach, with the added suggestion that it would likely prove mutually beneficial and agreeable if they would sometimes "turn to the left" instead of to the right in getting off the cars at the beach and thus become better acquainted with the splendid advantages of the beautiful residential sections.

Those in attendance from Ocean Beach included Mrs. Chas. F. May, Mrs. D. N. Shepley, Mrs. Anna E. Peery, Mrs. Anna Piltcher, Dr. Ida S. Wood, Mrs. F. A. Haskins, Miss M. B. Gould, Miss L. E. Crafford, Miss M. Mae Crafford, Mrs. John Clarke, Miss L. M. Grubbs, Miss M. S. Grubbs, Mrs. Mary Shepley and Mrs. Kirk Smith (Katherine).

Flowers were distributed by the visitors throughout the various offices and sections of the marine base. The mess hall tables were decorated and the hospital and the guard house inmates were remembered with floral tokens.

MISS GRACE E. SLATER OF THE CRAGS APARTMENTS FATALLY INJURED

News of the fatal accident to Miss Grace Eva Slater of the Crags Apartments, on last Friday afternoon proved a most saddening shock to her large circle of friends and acquaintances in the Ocean Beach community. It was reported to the authorities that about 4 p. m. Miss Slater was struck by a street car at the corner of Broadway and Fourth street and received a fracture of the skull when thrown to the pavement. She was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital where she expired a few hours later from her injuries.

Miss Slater was one of the owners of the Crags Apartments, being in partnership with her sister, Miss Mary E. Slater, in conducting the famous apartments in the Sunset Cliffs section of Ocean Beach. She had won a host of friends by her kind and courteous disposition and was possessed of a most gentle and loveable personality. She was a native of England, and besides her sister, Mary E. Slater, she is survived by a brother, John E. Slater, of Bigelow, Missouri.

SOUND IDEAS AND CONSERVATISM

If the recent primary election result teaches anything, it shows that the sentiment of the American people is for conservative and sound ideas of government and business. It should show both Republicans and Democrats, alike, that the men they put up for public office should be capable of impressing the voters with the fact that they will give, if elected, a sound economical and business-like administration of public affairs and curb the tendency to expand the functions of government to various fields of private activity.

ANTIQUATED METHODS RUINING THE "STRAND" AT OCEAN BEACH

Editor The Beach News:

Did you ever watch the antics of a spinning mouse? Well, if you haven't, I will say that it is a small rodent which spins on its axis until exhausted. After resting it reverses and continues the performance. Complete loss of energy and nothing accomplished.

Impossible as it may seem, this animal has a human counterpart here in Ocean Beach who goes it one better—the man who buries the K-E-L-P. Early and late he labors, dragging the kelp from the water's edge and burying it beneath the sand.

You will probably ask, "What's wrong with that?" Well, nothing, if the stuff would stay buried, but it won't.

When high tide comes in, one-half of the kelp comes out while the remainder lies half covered and rotting, killing what should be a fine beach. The water generally is full of fine stringy kelp washed out of the holes. Bathers dislike getting tangled in its slimy folds and as a consequence, other places are getting the patronage. The Strand is becoming spotted with half buried kelp deposits which stink to high heaven, while the dry parts of the beach are full of desicated kelp.

Why not mix brains with physical energy? The soil in and around Ocean Beach is sandy and all it requires to make it bloom like a rose is P-O-T-A-S-H. K-E-L-P is full of P-O-T-A-S-H. Why not R-A-K-E up the kelp with horsepower and either give or sell it to the townspeople. I for one, would gladly take some if placed within reach.

A-N-D—besides, a strong horse rake would accomplish more in one day than is now accomplished in a month—not to mention the great benefit to beach and bathers.

CATO.

P. S.—This is not intended as a reflection on the man who does the cleaning up on the beach.

WHY BANKS?

LESSON VII

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman,
Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association

Bank deposits are broadly divided into two kinds:

1. SAVINGS DEPOSITS
2. COMMERCIAL DEPOSITS.

J. H. Puelicher

SAVINGS DEPOSITS=deposits more or less permanent, in a savings bank or savings department of a bank, on which interest is paid, and which are withdrawn against the depositor's receipt; they in effect represent conservative investment of funds accumulated through personal thrift.

COMMERCIAL DEPOSITS=deposits in a business account at a bank from which money is withdrawn by check; they represent an essential facility for the conduct of business.

Many persons and all business houses have checking accounts in which to deposit the cash and checks which they receive and against which to draw their own checks to pay bills, wages and purchases. Thrifty people almost universally keep their savings in a savings account.

Latest reports from St. Joseph Hospital indicate that Policeman Herbert E. Webster is slowly improving from the effects of a murderous assault upon him by unknown persons more than a month ago. Reame, remains in faithful attendance at his bedside.

'TWO BUCKS'

By H. J. DEVEREAUX

Good-bye, two bucks, good-bye, old friend, good-bye,
Many a year we've pulled together, you and I;
And now that we must part, I'm feeling sad,
But C. of C. charter members, they'll feel glad
That you and I are parted!

Good-bye, good-bye, two bucks, I wish it were a dream;
I like to pinch your tail and hear the eagle scream,
But those grand days are past,
Into the world you've gone at last—
Now that we've parted!

You've joined the C. of C. to help make a mighty din,
The bunch who've got you now will put you in the swim;
So, bon voyage and farewell, my good old dollar;
You're boosting Ocean Beach, I will not holler,
Since we have parted!

EXPOSES THREE FINANCIAL FAKES

Politicians Mislead Public Regarding Corporations, Credit, and Railroads, Says F. N. Shepherd.

FALLACIES MET WITH FACTS

Declares People Will Make Short Shrift of Those Who Deceive Them When Aroused to Truth of Own Interests.

Three great misrepresentations, by which certain politicians have advanced their own interests at the expense of public welfare, were recently declared by F. N. Shepherd, Executive Manager, American Bankers Association, in an address at Kansas City, Missouri, to be the oft-repeated statements that "Wall Street" owns the corporations, that the Federal Reserve Banks discriminated against agriculture and deflated the farmers, and that there are seven billion dollars of "water" in railroad capitalization and rates should be reduced accordingly.

What Facts Tell

In regard to the alleged ownership of the corporations by "Wall Street," Mr. Shepherd showed that the securities of American corporations are very widely held by the people. The Union Pacific, he pointed out, has over 50,000 stockholders and the Pennsylvania Railroad 147,000 stockholders, 67,000 of whom are women, with an average ownership of 47 shares each. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has 200,000 stockholders, 120,000 of whom are employees, and the United States Steel Corporation has 174,000 stockholders. According to a recent report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, he said, Class I railroads have a total of 777,132 stockholders, there being, therefore, practically as many owners of shares as there are employees.

"The real capitalists of America," continued Mr. Shepherd, "are these and the bondholders whose funds are invested in securities through their thirty million savings accounts, and through their ownership of over 71 million life and industrial insurance policies. Once arouse these people to the fact that it is their interests which are being attacked through these misrepresentations and they will make short shrift of those who deceive them.

Truth About the Federal Reserve

"As to the Federal Reserve System, instead of its discriminating against the farmer, exactly the opposite is true. During the period of greatest decline in the value of agricultural products, about which there has been so much loose talk, rediscounts with Federal Reserve banks in non-agricultural districts actually decreased by 28 per cent, but in agricultural districts rediscounts were actually increased by 56 per cent. The Federal Reserve Banks of the big cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland poured into other Federal Reserve Banks in agricultural districts literally hundreds of millions of dollars.

"As to the alleged seven billions of 'water' in the railroads, a physical valuation of the railroad properties has been under way for the past ten years, as a result of the La Follette Act, conducted by a body of unprejudiced, non-political experts by whom the valuation has been placed at $18,900,000,000. Although it has been officially stated, and reiterated, that, in arriving at this figure, no consideration whatever was given to capitalization, politically-minded men are still deceiving the public, and particularly the farmers, about the 'water' in the railroads. Railroad stock today is not watered. Any possible fair scheme of valuation today proves that our railroads are worth from one to two billion dollars more than their capitalization.

No Railroad Income Guarantee

"Further, demagogues are telling people that the railroad income is guaranteed. The Esch-Cummins Act does not guarantee any return to railroad stockholders, as the demagogues constantly assert. By its terms the Act simply provides a yard stick for rate making, which is that a fair railroad rate is one which would show a return of 5¾ per cent upon the actual value of the property used in transportation in a given territory.

"This provision bears no relation whatever to railroad capitalization and, moreover, no relation to individual railroads, some of which might show earnings under such a rate-making provision in excess of six per cent, and some much less. No consideration whatever is given in the Act or in the administration of the Interstate Commerce Commission to railroad capitalization or any return upon it."

MIDDLEMAN'S PROFITS.

Words of objection on the part of the farmer against the middleman often are in vain, but the farmer who raises on his own acres all that his table requires, the year round, places himself in a position where he is largely independent of the middleman. Often the remedy for many objectional conditions lies in our own hands.

THE INFANT PRODIGY

The overnight development of the radio industry, even in a swiftly moving world, is one of the commercial romances of this century. Within the span of a little more than four years the ranks of the manufacturers, composed chiefly of those who had aided the army and navy during the war in the creation of the wireless telephone, have grown from a group of about fifty pioneers into an army of more than 3,000. Sales of radio material in 1920 amounted to a bare $1,000,000. It is estimated that the American public during the past year spent at least $150,000,000 in acquiring sets and parts of the instruments that tapped the ether. The strides that the industry is making may be indicated by the statement that expenditures for research by one of the large manufacturing groups during the next year will exceed the amount of the total sales just four years ago.

The industry is so new that the Government has been unable to take a census to determine its rank or proportions. Congress has not had time to frame legislation regulating it. Its past events have been kaleidoscopic, and the industry now is described by some as in a state of flux, although there are growing indications that it will settle down. For, with the changing phases, there is a distinct movement in the direction of standardization.—American Bankers Association Journal.
